INTRODUCTION

Buying and selling a home can be an exciting time. There's an opportunity to realise your hopes and dreams, and perhaps to begin a new part of your life.

However, the buying and selling process is not as easy as it looks, nor as straightforward as some people may tell you.

Inside this book

Moving Home has been written not only to guide you through the legal aspects of the transaction, but also - more broadly - to give you comprehensive and practical advice on what to expect when you buy or sell your home.

We have provided separate sections for people buying and selling homes, as well as a discussion of the many other issues (legal or otherwise) you will need to consider during the process. There is also a chapter on different types of property- apartments, timeshares, holiday homes, retirement villages and buying for investment.

You will also find practical countdown lists, a moving checklist and a glossary of property transaction terms. Throughout the book you will find some lined pages to make notes.

Contact us early

If you are thinking of buying or selling property, please contact us early. Not only will we carry out the actual transaction for you, but we can also provide you with legal advice on how to structure your affairs. At the end of the book you will find contact details for our HomeLegal Lawyers.

We hope you find this book useful.

BUYING YOUR HOME

When you are looking at buying a house, it's easy to get excited about living in a new place and adding your own personal touches to it.

However, buying a home is probably one of the biggest investments you will ever make. It is sensible to obtain the best advice not only to ensure your purchase is smooth and trouble-free, but also to make sure the house is in good order, there are no issues with the property title, and that any future plans you may have for the house can be achieved.

Taking some time at the outset to read and follow the steps in this book may help save you time and money, and will give you the peace of mind that everything is well organised when you buy your home.

First step: call us

We are here to help and guide you through the entire process from when you first look at buying a new house to settlement day when you open the front door to your new home, and beyond.

Talking with us before you even start looking at houses will help you make the right decisions and ensure your property purchase is carried out efficiently and cost-effectively.

We can give you some preliminary advice about the Agreement for Sale & Purchase and the buying process, and also talk with you about the best method to protect your investment. For example, if you do not already have a family trust, you may want to look into whether this is the best method to safeguard your newly purchased property. If so, you may want to consider establishing a family trust before you buy your new house, and you will need to set aside some time to do this.

Most importantly, do not sign an Agreement without talking with us first.

Real estate agents

The real estate agent dealing with the property you are thinking of buying has been engaged by the seller (or vendor) of the property and not by you. This means that the agent is acting for the seller and is acting in their best interests. Any advice the agent gives you, however well meaning, is secondary to the advice given to the seller.

If you want to receive independent advice that is tailored to your own interests, it is best you talk with us, before signing an agreement.

MAKING AN OFFER

You have found a house you want to buy and want to make an offer. Before you go ahead, there are a number of things you should think about before the offer documentation is completed.

You may wish or your bank may require you to make some further checks before you go too much further. These may involve obtaining:

- Independent valuation by a registered valuer
- LIM Report
- Copy of the District Plan (in relation to the house being purchased)
- Building inspection by a building inspector, and/or an
- Engineer's report by a registered engineer.

The latter two points are particularly important if you are worried about a leaky building. You should note that in a multi-unit development, the leaky building could involve all the owners, including yourself and not just the owner of the individual leaking unit.

As these reports will often involve extra costs to you, you may wish to make these part of the offer conditions.

In addition, you must take particular care to ensure that the financial side are things are water-tight, see more below.

Applying for a loan

When you decide to put in an offer on a new home you will need to make sure you have sufficient funds available to pay a deposit and to service or 'payoff' a loan. To calculate your ability to service a loan, your lender will usually give you a comprehensive work sheet asking you to list your assets and liabilities, income and expenditure, together with a monthly budget, to ensure you can meet the loan repayments.

If you want to do some preliminary calculations, most lenders provide calculation worksheets on their website.

Banks and other lenders place emphasis on different criteria for loans. There is a wide variety of lending products available, even within the same bank. It is well worth doing some research to ensure you have the best loan and one to suit your own circumstances.

You will need to talk with your proposed lender to make sure you will have all the funds necessary to ensure you can meet the obligations of your offer, on the terms that suit you.

Your lender will help you decide on the term (length) of the mortgage and on the mortgage product best suited for your circumstances. They may suggest a fixed or floating rate for your loan, or a combination of both. You may want a table, reducing or interest-only mortgage.

We can recommend a mortgage broker which may save you time having to shop around for the most appropriate arrangements to suit your own financial requirements.

Application fees

Lenders often charge an application fee for a mortgage (or it is added to the loan itself). Make sure that you have included this in your calculations.

Do be cautious if the seller's real estate agent offers to arrange your finance. The agent is still acting for the seller and a conflict of interest may arise if they are acting for you and for the seller at the same time.

Our advice is to make arrangements with your lender yourself; alternatively, we are happy to act on your behalf.

Future plans

If you plan to make alterations, additions or to sub-divide or develop the property, talk with us about the viability of doing this. For instance, many house alterations require building consent, and subdivisions will require resource consent and may involve accounting for GST. This may have implications on the cost-effectiveness of your proposed projects.

Moving budget

In addition to the funds required to finance your new property, you should write a budget for the actual relocation cost.

Your budget should include the moving company's fee, insurance to cover the transport of your possessions from one place to another, telecommunications, power or gas connection fees, burglar alarm check or installation of an alarm at your new property, boarding kennels for your pets if needed and so on. You should also ensure you have some contingency funds so you have the cash to pay for any unexpected expenses.

APPLYING FOR A LOAN

Most people need to apply for a home loan to help pay for their house purchase. There are a number of different lenders in the marketplace ranging from trading banks through to finance companies and private banks. When dealing with a lender, mortgage broker or any financial advisor, we recommend you check they are compliant with the Financial Advisers Act.

Each lender has a range of mortgage products available, all of which have different criteria, terms and conditions. Finding your way through this maze is not always easy. You should shop around and talk with lenders to get the most appropriate product for your particular circumstances.

Some people may prefer to use a mortgage broker to help them. Make sure that you get a broker who deals in the type of product that you want. For example, you may want a short notice loan so you need to ensure your broker deals in that type of product.

When considering using a broker find out how you pay for their services. Most brokers are paid a commission by a lender, or others may charge you an extra fee. Check before you sign anything and talk with us if you would like advice.

A quick comparison of interest rates and products can be found on www.interest.co.nz

A lender's security

When considering a loan application a lender will want to ensure:

- You have enough income to meet the loan repayments and other outgoings. This is sometimes known as 'debt servicing'. A lender will usually ask for a monthly budget to ensure you can afford the mortgage repayments, and
- There is enough security in the property. Lenders sometimes refer to this as the 'security ratio criteria'. It is the difference between the value of the property (which may be different from the price) and your personal contributions.

Two stage process

There is generally a two stage process to obtain housing finance.

Stage One: Looking for a new home

You should approach a lender before looking to buy a home to establish how much you can borrow. This will establish the price range of the property you can afford.

A lender will need to have evidence of your gross income/s (generally a lender will accept a pay slip as proof of income), a monthly household budget and a statement of position which lists your assets, any liabilities and so on.

To help you in your preliminary calculations to work out how much you can borrow and afford to repay, most lenders have mortgage calculators on their websites.

To make your offer as 'clean' as possible, ie: as few conditions as achievable, you may want to obtain some formal pre-approval from a lender to make your offer up to a particular sum. Talk with your lender about this.

Stage Two: Once the Agreement is signed

When the Agreement is signed you should immediately lodge a formal loan application with your chosen lender. At that stage, your lender will need a copy of the Agreement; some lenders may need a copy of the title for the property.

If the amount sought exceeds your lender's security ratios, they may need a registered valuation of the property before confirming a loan.

Other considerations

It is important to note that even if a lender has indicated a loan will be approved before the Agreement is signed, the Agreement should still be made conditional on 'obtaining finance satisfactory to the purchaser', unless you have a formal written loan offer from a lender.

It would be unwise to simply rely on a verbal indication from your lender that a given sum will be lent.

Lenders have slightly different lending criteria. If one lender turns your application down, another may be able to help.

Even if your borrowing exceeds the security ratio, some lenders may still lend where mortgage guarantee insurance cover is arranged. This insurance is taken out at your cost to protect the lender.

It may also be possible to 'massage' your financial debts by increasing your borrowing to repay short term credit card and hire purchase debt to bring you within the lender's criteria. This may be investigated if the lender initially declines a loan.

If you are using Kiwisaver funding or obtaining a Kainga Ora First Home Grant, you should talk to us as soon as possible to ensure that your application meets the necessary timeframes.

SELLING YOUR HOME

If you are thinking of selling your home, talk with us before contacting a real estate agent and placing your property on the market.

We will check that your property title is in good order and may advise you to fix any discrepancies or irregularities.

Before placing your property on the market, we recommend that you take care of some paperwork beforehand:

- Obtain your property's Land Information Memorandum (LIM) Report (see the section below), and
- Unit title property owners should read the section Unit titles and ensure you have all the required documents available.

LIM Report

We recommend that you obtain your property's Land Information (LIM) Report before placing your property on the market. The LIM Report is produced by the local authority, to whom you will need to pay a fee.

The LIM Report gives information about plumbing, drainage and water reticulation plans, issued consents and permits, compliance schedules, licences, special site features, swimming pool fence regulations, unsatisfied requirements and many other details about your property.

The LIM Report will give a prospective buyer a lot of information about your property, and whether or not you (or earlier owners) have complied with the local authority's requirements.

It is wise to review the LIM Report before placing your property on the market as there may be some problems of which you were previously unaware. If you wait for a potential purchaser to obtain the LIM Report and problems are discovered, you could be in for a nasty surprise.

Prospective buyers may wish to insert an extra clause into the Agreement making the purchase subject to their approval of the LIM Report. Having a LIM Report available to prospective buyers may circumvent having such a clause or speed up the time it takes to make the purchase unconditional.

Unit titles

Special provisions apply if your property is a unit title. Before placing your unit title property on the market, you should have copies of all insurance policies or certificates effected by the body corporate, as well as a copy of a pre-contract disclosure statement. A prospective buyer will ask to see these before they put in an offer.

Appointing a real estate agent

We recommend that you shop around to find a real estate agent. Look around to see which agencies cover your area and which seem to have SOLD signs up quickly, look on the internet for properties for sale in your area and visit some open homes. This will help you get a feel for the market and for the real estate agencies operating in your area.

Get your shortlist of agencies down to two or three and ask them to look at your property. Each agency should be prepared to make a presentation to you on why they should be selected to act for you. They will give you an idea of price expectations and they should have prepared a preliminary marketing plan for your property. They should also let you know what costs will be incurred to help sell your property; this will include newspaper advertising, photographs, internet listings, signage and so on. All these costs will (usually) be additional to the commission you will be paying the agent.

Most importantly you also want to make sure that you and the real estate agent feel at ease with one another. Selling a property can be a very stressful and emotional time and the whole process is much easier if you and the agent can work comfortably together.

Once you have decided on a real estate agent to act for you, you need to sign an agency agreement. Read it over carefully before signing and do not hesitate to ask any questions if you are unclear on anything. We would be happy to review the agency agreement for you.

Auction, tender, fixed price or private sale?

The most common ways of selling a house are:

- Auction
- Tender, open or closed, or
- By negotiation.

Your real estate agent will be able to tell you about the processes of each method of sale and what may be appropriate for your particular property and the area in which you live. We can also talk with you about the legal implications of whichever sale method you choose.

Price

Your real estate agent will guide you on the best asking price, the price guide or the auction reserve for your house. This will be based on the Rating Valuation and recent sale prices of properties in your area. The price will also include the chattels.

If your property has special features (such as garages on a road reserve, or you simply do not agree with the figures supplied to you, it may be worthwhile getting a private valuation before agreeing to a sale price or range.

The Sale Agreement

The standard form of Agreement for Sale and Purchase is the Auckland District Law Society (ADLS) Real Estate Institute of New Zealand (REINZ) agreement.

The standard Agreement is designed to be neutral to buyers and sellers. Your real estate agent will assist you to 'fill in the gaps'. However, a number of other clauses may need to be inserted or deleted.

You will also need to decide which chattels are to be sold with the house as these are listed individually in the Agreement.

Talk with us if you have anything you would like clarified, or need some advice.

When an offer is presented to you by a prospective buyer, do talk with us BEFORE you sign the Sale Agreement. It should already be signed by the prospective buyers.

An offer may be unconditional, or it may be conditional on the sale of the prospective buyer's own home, or confirming finance, or it may contain other conditions.

If there are too many conditions its effect could be simply to give the buyer an option to buy your property, rather than a firm sale, which could be disadvantageous to you.

All people who are listed on the title as owning the house will need to sign as sellers if the offer is counter-signed or the offer is accepted. This means that if your property is owned by a trust, all trustees must sign.

Please note that if one of the sellers is away or unable to sign, we can arrange for a Power of Attorney to be prepared which gives necessary authority to someone who can sign on their behalf.

Once the prospective buyer's offer is accepted and both parties have signed the Agreement and initialled all the changes, you are both bound by its conditions. The deposit will be called for, and any conditions will need to be fulfilled within the agreed time limits so settlement can proceed.

Keys

The Agreement states that you will make available for the buyer all keys for exterior doors, electronic door openers and the alarm codes (unless the property is tenanted). These must all be available on settlement day.

If you have given keys to anyone, you will need to get it back in time for settlement.

Buying a new property

When you sell one property, you are usually buying another and may move into your new property on the day you leave your old house. It is probably best for both properties to be settled on the same day and for the respective conditions of both Agreements to operate contemporaneously.

The settlement process

We will prepare a settlement statement showing the buyer the amount to be paid on settlement day. A discharge of any mortgage or other debt shown on the title will be arranged and you can expect to sign a transfer authority about a week before settlement day.

From the proceeds of sale, and immediately after settlement, we will organise the repayment of any mortgages so that clear title is given to your buyer.

Rates and other outgoings such as body corporate payments will be apportioned to the settlement date. The buyer's lawyer will require us to personally guarantee that the rates are paid, the water meter has been read at the settlement date and the water account paid. We will organise payment of these and account to you for the sale proceeds.

MOVING CHECKLIST

Tick these tasks off as you go!

When the Agreement has been confirmed, you can begin to let people know of your new address and the date on which you are moving. NZ Post provides some useful cards for this or use NZ Post's website www.changemyaddress.co.nz. Some real estate companies also offer a similar service.

<input type="checkbox"/>	Vet

You may also want to ask NZ Post to redirect all your mail. There is a small charge for this unless you are over 65 when it is free. You can choose the duration of the redirection.

- Arrange with the alarm monitoring company to terminate monitoring in your old house, and install it in your new property on moving day. Remember to get the current codes from the seller, and then register your new alarm codes.
- Organise a packing and removal company. This needs to be done well in advance. Get estimates from a couple of companies at least, together with copies of references and copies of their contracts. Make sure you organise insurance for your goods in transit. Do check your existing contents policy as sometimes moving contents is included - you don't want to pay twice over.
- If you are organising the move yourself, start to collect boxes and packing materials. Make sure your furniture is insured in transit, telling the insurance company you are packing yourself.
- Start organising what you will take with you in the move and what should be disposed of. You may have things that are still in good order but you don't want to take with you. These things could be given to a local charity, you could have a garage sale, sell them on TradeMe or recycle through www.freecycle.org.nz
- Company directors must notify the Registrar of Companies of a change of address. If your home is the registered office of your company (or any other) you will also need to notify the Registrar of Companies. Time limits apply and special forms are needed. This can be done through www.companiesoffice.co.nz or we can help arrange notification.
- Ensure home and contents insurance is arranged for your new property.
- Ensure the utility companies have connected their services to your new house. (Not all companies operate in every area.)

(Telecommunications, Electricity, Gas)
- Change any direct debits for rates, electricity, gas, etc over to your new property.
- Carry out a pre-settlement inspection of your new property, making sure that you arrange this with the seller's permission. This means you can check to ensure any promised work has been completed. This also allows you to check that all the chattels you are buying with the house are operational and are left in the house on settlement day. It is very worthwhile testing every appliance, trying the garage door, ensuring the television works so the aerial is operating, etc.
- Read the meter/son moving day and phone through the readings to your gas/ electricity suppliers.
- Organise the actual move into your new home. Check with the sellers when they are moving out as they may leave before settlement day or on the day itself. You don't want a clash of moving men!

Unless you have made prior arrangements for access, the moving company must wait until settlement has actually taken place and you have keys before they begin to unload your furniture.

Before moving into your new home, ask the seller to list the following:

- Their forwarding address, email and telephone number
- Neighbours' names and phone numbers
- Location of the mains and meters for water, gas and electricity
- Burglar alarm instructions and operating manual. Check if any alarm monitoring
- Rubbish and recycling collection details
- Bus routes
- Names of trades people who normally service the house
- Spare parts of any appliances, the guarantee cards and operating manuals
- House plans and wallpaper and paint samples

Finally, make sure that you keep out your kettle, coffee and mugs or perhaps some cold drinks. There is nothing better than a hot cup of coffee or a glass of wine to enjoy when you have completed your move.

Apartments

Unit title: The usual method of apartment ownership is a unit title.

Under a unit title scheme, all the owners comprise a body corporate which is responsible for maintaining the fabric and structure of the building and the grounds, as well as insurance. In addition to the usual outgoings for apartment living, you will also need to take into account any extra costs levied by the body corporate.

Depending on the size of the building, its construction and location, the body corporate levy could also include payment for garden maintenance, a building manager, a body corporate secretary and lift maintenance.

You should take particular note of the body corporate rules which set out the way in which it is run. Some rules are easily altered, others are not. There may be special rules relating to tennis courts, swimming pools, the barbeque area and any social clubs. Rules about pet ownership are usually particularly clear. For example, a budgie maybe fine but a large dog may not be acceptable.

Apartments that are within a hotel complex have very particular rules and specific issues to consider.

The rules may set out how you live your life, and this may not suit your lifestyle.

If you are buying the apartment as an investment, you must ensure it can be let. Often specific rules apply to tenancies and it pays to check these before you decide to buy.

Buying off the plans: If the building is still only a set of plans, there are many issues (for example, taxation implications) to be taken into account before finally committing to a purchase. You should check whether any other buildings are being constructed nearby (or are on the drawing board) that may obstruct sunlight or views. Inner city apartments can be noisy from traffic, restaurants, late night revellers, railway lines, etc.

Special arrangements will need to apply to your deposit so it is not lost if the development does not proceed.

Flat owning companies: Whilst apartments are usually owned on a unit title, some 'flat owning companies' still exist. In this situation you buy shares in the company which owns the building. There are some issues with the saleability of an apartment which is held in this type of ownership. For example each purchaser must have the existing owners' consent to be 'let in'. This can sometimes reduce the pool of possible purchasers and, of course, the price.

Investment properties

Owning an investment property can be a very worthwhile endeavour. The return on the investment may be greatly enhanced if the ownership structure is considered at the time of purchase. The property can, of course, be purchased personally. Alternatively you can buy the property through a Look Through Company (LTC) or you may prefer to form a new family trust. Do talk with us early on so we can talk about the best ownership method for your particular situation.

During the purchase negotiations, careful thought should be given to the valuation of the chattels. The contract will need a special clause if depreciation is to be maximised.

You should also factor into your calculations the time taken to get new tenants and also the cost and time taken to fix any deferred maintenance.

Any investor in residential property should be familiar with the Residential Tenancies Act 1986, the scope and powers of the Tenancy Tribunal and tenants' rights. Particular rules apply to bonds and tenancy agreements.

Selling an investment property: When selling you will need to take into account 'recovered depreciation' when setting your price, particularly for chattels. There could be serious tax consequences if this is not done correctly.

Tax: Specific tax issues need to be addressed when buying or selling investment properties. Your choice of buyer (ie: yourself, a company or trust) is just one of these. We can advise you on the most advantageous structure to adopt. It is extremely important to talk with us BEFORE signing the Agreement so any taxation advantages can be taken into account.

Baches, cribs and holiday homes

Sometimes baches, cribs and holiday homes are acquired for reasons other than their holiday value; holiday homes can play a specific role in retirement or investment planning.

The ownership structure for second homes should therefore be carefully considered. There may also be an opportunity to minimise tax; we can talk with you on specialist tax advice.

As the property is likely to be empty for much of the year, your insurance company must be notified of this. You may need to invest in a burglar alarm and/or special locks or shutters to help keep it secure.

There are also tax consequences of owing property that is not your main home and we recommend that get tax advice before buying a holiday home.

Lifestyle blocks

There is more to this than deciding whether or not you may need a ride-on mower!

Bare blocks: You will need to ascertain if there is a suitable building platform for placing a house. Some titles have restrictions pointing out foundation difficulties, but others may not. Check with the local authority before you buy.

Water supply (for the house and possible irrigation requirements), drainage and septic tank requirements and regulations, as well as electricity supply and telephone lines should all be checked.

Access can be an issue on bare blocks. Many blocks have a lengthy right-of-way or shared road; some of these may not be formed at the time of purchase and could be expensive to construct.

Income-generating blocks: Those life-stylers who want to make a living from the block will need to consider the economic viability of the land and soil tests may be needed. Talk with us if you would like some help with ascertaining the economic viability of your plans.

Buyers may want to consider obtaining a Land Information Report (UR) from the local authority. The UR gives details relating to the physical and natural resources of the property and may cover issues relating to flooding, contamination and water.

GST: Prospective buyers should be aware that there could be GST payable when buying a lifestyle block.

Non-residents: Please note that if you are not a New Zealand resident then any purchase of land over five hectares is subject to your obtaining approval with the Overseas Investment Office. As this can be a lengthy process you will need to contact us before signing any Agreement for Sale & Purchase to ensure this issue is properly covered.

Timeshares

In most respects buying a timeshare is very similar to any other property purchase, however there are some differences.

Most timeshare properties in New Zealand have been set up using the body corporate structure accompanied by registered leases of every unit for each timeshare week. The registered proprietor of a timeshare title receives a share of the strata title and the lease of a unit for their timeshare week. You should obtain advice from the timeshare sellers and the body corporate or operator on pooling agreement administration where a timeshare is part of a holiday resort.

Retirement villages

The physical security and wide range of activities offered by retirement villages are of major appeal to prospective residents. Retirement villages must operate within the Retirement Villages Act 2003 and its amendments, including the Code of Residents' Rights.

If you are considering living in a retirement village, do talk with us early on as we can advise on the unique nature of buying into this type of development. Issues to be considered before proceeding will depend on whether the village is already established, or merely a set of plans.

Before committing yourself to buy a unit, you should be aware of the nature of the occupation right offered in a retirement village. Most retirement villages do not offer readily transferable titles. The interest that is acquired by a buyer is generally a 'licence to occupy'. This is similar to a lease that gives the resident the right to occupy a unit, but there are no rights over the land. In general, the occupation right is not able to be sold or otherwise disposed of other than through the retirement village proprietor.

Some villages have titles with a life interest, with a mortgage back to the buyer to secure the licence to occupy.

Most retirement villages require an up-to-date prospectus to be available to prospective buyers.

Read it carefully and do hand it over to us for a close inspection so we can advise on the special nature of this type of purchase.

Of particular importance is the method of sale of the unit and reimbursement of capital when the time comes to sell your unit. Talk with the retirement village proprietor about this. The village will usually not pay you out until there is a buyer for your unit and there can be considerable delays in the reimbursement of capital. You should also investigate what is involved in moving from a unit into the hospital section of the retirement village (if there is one), and also the weekly or monthly service charges.

Moving into a retirement village can be of huge benefit to the elderly, and also to their families. Make sure you have done thorough research and remember to talk with us well before proceeding with a purchase.

Overseas property investments

New Zealanders buying overseas:

- If you are a New Zealander considering buying property offshore you will need to be very cautious about the type of property being offered. Do your research first, and then talk with us before taking the prospective purchase any further.
- Be wary of free trips 'without obligation' and high pressure sales people. Offers of 'guaranteed returns' should be viewed with caution. Remember, if it sounds too good to be true, it usually is.
- Non-residents buying New Zealand property: If you are neither a New Zealand citizen, nor ordinarily resident in New Zealand, you may need to apply to the Overseas Investment Office (OIO) for consent to buy:
 - 'Sensitive land' which includes all non-urban land over 5 hectares and that land as defined as sensitive by the Overseas Investment Act.
- The Overseas Investment Act 2005 states how the rules apply. However, check with us first as to the application of the rules.

DO NOT sign any documents until you have talked with us.

PROTECTING YOUR INVESTMENT

The need to protect a family's investments has always been very important. For hundreds of years people have wanted to safeguard their family's assets from any risks and claims.

You will also want to make sure your wishes regarding your property are carried out on your death.

This section gives an overview on a range of options to protect your assets.

What to think about

In order to protect your property investment you need think about a number of issues which range from the method by which your title is held to the possible establishment of a family trust.

You should think about:

- The nature of your employment and whether you are an employee, self-employed or an employer
- Exposure to creditors
- Your relationship: single, married, living in a de facto relationship, same sex relationship, or second and subsequent marriages
- Whether or not you have children, and
- Your hopes and aspirations.

In addition, the Property (Relationships) Act 1976 has had a major impact on all asset protection issues. It is a complex topic about which we need to talk with you face-to-face as one size does not fit all.

However, we provide a brief overview below.

Property (Relationships) Act 1976

It applies automatically to all people who are married, and to people who are over 18 years old and who have lived in a de facto relationship for at least three years. In some circumstances the Act applies to de facto couples who have been living together for less than three years, for example, where there is a dependent child. The legislation also applies to same sex couples.

When a couple separates, all property acquired during that relationship is, as a general rule, shared equally between them. The reasons why the relationship ended are not relevant to this equal sharing rule.

The relationship home and other family chattels, including motor vehicles and boats, are also shared equally after three years, even if they were owned by only one of the parties before the relationship began.

Equal sharing applies whether the property is owned in joint or individual names.

Equal sharing also applies in the event of one partner dying during the relationship. The surviving partner then has a period of six months to decide whether to accept the provisions of the deceased person's Will, or to make a claim for an equal share of the relationship property under the Act. Wills need to be carefully considered in the light of this legislation.

What are possible solutions?

It is possible to 'contract out' of the provisions of the Act if it does not suit your individual circumstances or will lead to a grossly unfair situation. Any agreement however must be fair to the other party. You are required to get independent legal advice and sign the contracting out agreement for it to have legal effect. Some agreements can be quite complex, but time spent now can prevent tears, frustration and litigation later.

Family trusts also give some protection from the legislation.

Joint tenancy

'Joint tenancy' is a method of owning your home in conjunction with another person, whether or not that person is a partner or a spouse. On the death of one joint tenant, the property is automatically transferred to the survivor regardless of the provisions of the deceased's Will.

Tenants in common

A property may be held as 'tenants in common'. If one partner dies, their share does not pass automatically to the survivor (unlike a joint tenancy), but passes according to the deceased's Will.

This ownership method is often recommended for partners or friends buying property together. It is also particularly important to think about this ownership structure when people want to reserve their share for their children (whether or not from another or prior relationship).

Joint Family Home

Having your home registered as a Joint Family Home (JFH) is a comparatively inexpensive method to achieve limited protection against creditors' claims.

It is currently only available to married couples, and does not include couples who have a civil union. On registration as a JFH the property is owned by husband and wife as joint tenants. The registration is noted on the property's title.

The main advantage of having a JFH is to provide protection for the home owners of up to, currently, $103,000 against ordinary creditors. It does not apply, however, against mortgagees.

The protection is granted immediately on settlement of the property as a JFH if the JFH application has been advertised (without any creditor lodging a caveat as an objection). If the application is not advertised, protection against creditors is deferred for two years from the settlement.

If your home is already registered as a JFH, when buying a new home it is possible to transfer the benefit from your current home to your new property immediately without having to advertise. Only one home can be registered as a JFH at any one time.

Family trust

Family trusts are the most commonly used method of asset protection and they are the best solution in many cases.

However, a family trust will only be recommended if it suits your individual circumstances. We can talk with you about your assets and liabilities so you can decide whether a trust is the best method to protect your property.

Wills

If you are buying a home, it is essential you have a Will. You are the owner of a major asset and it is imperative that you leave instructions about what should happen to your property if you die.

Many people misunderstand what happens with the disposal of assets if someone dies without a Will (this is called intestacy).

A Will ensures that your wishes are carried out subject to any possible claims that could be brought under the Family Protection Act 1955 and the Testamentary Promises Act 1949.

In addition, the Property (Relationships) Act 1976 has major implications for homeowners. It is essential that we talk about this while the property transaction is being prepared.

If you already have a Will, this is a good time to review it to ensure it is up-to-date and it still reflects your wishes. Inquire about our HomeLegal Plus package. Our Trust and Assets team have put together a complementary package for HomeLegal clients at a significant discount to our standard costs.

Enduring Powers of Attorney

You should also make sure you have Enduring Powers of Attorney (EPA) so that in the event of an accident or some incapacity, decisions can be made about your welfare and/or property, and keep your affairs in order. There are two forms of EPA.

Power of Attorney in relation to personal care and welfare: This grants your attorney the power to act for you generally, although it may be restricted to defined specific matters such as a choice of rest home, medical care, etc. You can also place restrictions on your attorney, for example, ensuring that they consult with other family members before making final decisions.

There can be only one attorney (usually a spouse, partner or close relative) appointed in relation to your personal care and welfare. Provision can be made in the document for an alternative if the first appointee dies or becomes incapable.

Power of Attorney in relation to property: This allows the attorney to act in relation to all your property, or to specific property. More than one attorney may be appointed.

The witnessing provisions for EPAs are complex; we will make sure that each EPA is signed and witnessed correctly.

COSTS FOR THE TRANSACTION

Knowing and understanding the costs involved is an important part of your property transaction. Not only do you have to factor in the legal costs, you will also need to budget for the real estate agent's commission, any advertising costs, obtaining a LIM Report, any specialists' reports such as a valuer or building inspector, the costs of a removal company, reconnection fees for utilities and telecommunications and so on.

We can give you a fixed fee for your particular transaction. This will include the fee for the time taken, the disbursements (such as title searches, registration fees, etc) and GST. In accordance with the New Zealand Law Society's Client Care Rules we will advise you of the costs in a letter of engagement.

Being responsible for the sale and/or purchase of a property is not simply a matter of filling in a few forms. There is a great deal of compliance. We take responsibility for that compliance for you.

For us to give you an accurate cost for your transaction you will need to let us know how you will be funding the purchase, who the owner will be (eg, you personally, a trust or a company) and the type of property you are purchasing.

If you also need a new Will, or require a property sharing agreement, let us know.

WHAT IF IT GOES WRONG?

Although you would have done everything possible to make sure you have a trouble-free move, sometimes things can go wrong and there is a dispute - however big or small. The Agreement for Sale & Purchase may still be relevant, so talk with us in the first instance.

Handling disputes

If the dispute is an issue you want to resolve yourself, we recommend you take the suggested steps below.

- Ensure you have got all the facts correct. This includes confirming the expectations that you believed you had, who said what and on what date
- Write down the sequence of events from start to finish. Make sure you have copies of all documentation and photographs, if appropriate
- Decide what remedy you want. This could be putting right the problem, a letter of apology or some compensation, and
- Talk with the person or organisation involved. Present your case politely and reasonably. Give them the opportunity to respond to your situation within an agreed timeframe. If this approach does not work or you are still dissatisfied, you should talk with the person's manager or to head office.

It should be possible to fix the majority of issues in this way.

If this does not work or you are still dissatisfied, there are industry bodies that can be contacted.

Taking legal action

Many of the industry bodies listed above do not offer compensation, costs or damages. If you seek this sort of remedy, you may need to take legal action - either the Disputes Tribunal or in court.

Disputes Tribunal

The Disputes Tribunal can hear claims for up to $20,000, or up to $30,000 if the other side agrees.

For more information look at www.courts.govt.nz or ring your local district court.

Larger sums

If the compensation, costs or damages you are seeking are over the sum/s dealt with in the Disputes Tribunal, please talk with us.

GLOSSARY

Agreement - The written contract for the sale and purchase of a property. Its full title is 'Agreement for Sale & Purchase'. In 2009 changes were made to the Agreement for Sale & Purchase. The Auckland

District Law Society (ADLS) updated its existing Agreement form, and the Real Estate Institute of New Zealand (REINZ) introduced its own new Agreement. Either form can be used. The Agreement is a binding document: once signed you are bound by its conditions.

Auction - Potential buyers bid against each other to buy a property at a public sale. Auction sales are always unconditional, and usually a 10% deposit is required on the fall of the hammer.

BEO (Buyer Enquiry Over) - A term often used in real estate advertisements giving potential purchasers a guide of the minimum price expected by the sellers.

Body corporate - Used in relation to apartment blocks, the body corporate is the owners' group that supervises the building maintenance, collects and pays the insurance premiums, runs the block, supervises the use of common areas, etc.

Caveat - A warning notice registered against the title to the land that another party may have an interest or right on that property.

Caveat emptor - A Latin phrase meaning 'Let the buyer beware'.

Certificate of Title - An electronic document showing legal ownership of a block of land or an interest in land. Also known as a 'CT' or simply 'title'.

Chattel - An item of moveable property, such as carpets, curtains, stove, etc which are included in the sale price of a property. Chattels to be included in the house sale must be listed individually in the Agreement. A property valuation is usually made without taking the value of the chattels into account.

CCC (Code Compliance Certificate) - Issued by a local authority building officer or other official, stating the building work complies with the provisions in the Building Act and the building permit issued for the work.

Commission - Percentage of the sale price paid to the real estate agent by the seller. Commission usually ranges between 2.5-4.5% and is often negotiable.

Conditional/Unconditional - The Agreement allows for both 'conditional' and 'unconditional' contracts. An unconditional agreement is not bound by any conditions such as finance approval, LIM Report, etc. A conditional contract has conditions attached to it, such as finance being confirmed.

Contract - Also known, in this context, as 'the Agreement'. A contract is a binding and enforceable agreement between two or more parties. See 'Agreement'.

Conveyancing - In this context, the work carried out by lawyers to transfer property from one person or entity to another.

Covenant - An agreement to abide by a particular condition, for example, an undertaking not to fence the front portion of a plot of land.

Cross-lease - The building is leased and the share of the land the building occupies is owned.

Deposit - A proportion of the purchase price (usually 5-10%) is paid by the buyer when either the Agreement is signed or the Agreement conditions are met.

Disbursements - Disbursements are out-of-pocket expenses (such as title search and registration fees) incurred by a lawyer, on a client's behalf, and reimbursed to the lawyer by the client.

Discharge - When a mortgage is discharged, it is repaid in full and formally removed from the title (hence 'clear' title).

District Plan - A statutory planning document outlining land use and zones. Issued by a local authority.

Easement - A right over the property of another, such as a drainage easement over a neighbouring property, or a right-of-way.

E-dealing - The term given to electronic land registration in New Zealand. Since 2009 all land registrations have been carried out electronically.

Encroachment - An unauthorised extension over a boundary of land, for example, by building on the property of a neighbour.

Enduring Power of Attorney (EPA or EPoA) - A legal ability to manage someone's affairs on their behalf. An EPA is usually used if a person becomes physically or mentally incapable of managing their own affairs. There are two types of EPAs: Personal Care and Welfare, and Property. Special rules apply to signing and witnessing EPAs.

Equity - The amount of the property value that the owner actually owns outright, rather than owes to a lender. For example, a property may be worth $500,000; the mortgage owed is $150,000; therefore the owner's equity is $350,000.

Fee Simple - Title to a property where there are no restrictions in the manner in which it can be held, kept or inherited.

Fixtures and fittings - A fixture is an item that cannot be removed from the land or building without damage, such as a built-in bookcase. A fitting is an item that can be removed from a property without causing damage, such as lampshades.

Freehold - Usually refers to land on which there is no mortgage or other debt.

GV - The abbreviation for 'Government Valuation', now replaced with 'Rating Valuation'.

Joint Family Home (JFH) - Established by the Joint Family Homes Act 1964, a JFH provides limited protection (currently $103,000) against claims of creditors on a property following special registration procedures. This is currently available to married couples only.

Joint tenancy - Two or more people own the property. On the death of one of the owners, that person's share automatically passes to the surviving owner/s.

Landonline - Website providing property professionals with secure access to New Zealand's titles register. It is maintained by Land Information New Zealand (LINZ). www.landonline.govt.nz

Leasehold - Land which is rented (or leased) from an owner.

Licence to occupy - The occupier of a property does not actually own the property, although has the right to occupy it by signing a licence. Frequently used in retirement homes.

UM Report - A Land Information Memorandum Report is issued by a local authority giving details about the property such as rates owing, consents and drains. The council will release a property's LIM Report on payment of a fee which varies from district to district. A LIM Report is used for a property with an existing building.

LINZ - Land Information New Zealand (LINZ) is a government department responsible for land titles, geodetic and cadastral survey systems, topographic information, hydrographic information, managing Crown property and a variety of other functions. All titles to land are registered at LINZ.

UR - A Land Information Report (UR) is issued by a regional authority giving details relating to the physical and natural resources relevant to a property. It is usually obtained for a rural property and may cover flooding, contamination and water issues.

Matrimonial property agreement - Now replaced with 'relationship property agreement'.

Mortgage - A charge over the property of another given as security for a loan; usually required by a lender as security for a loan. 'Mortgage' is the commonly used term for a home loan. There are various types of mortgages: table, reducing or interest-only.

Mortgagee - The lender taking a mortgage. Mortgagor - The borrower giving the mortgage.

Nominee - The person nominated by a buyer. Under the Agreement form currently used, the buyer named is personally liable to complete the contract.

Option - An agreement giving the buyer the right to acquire the property from the seller. Often it refers to an agreement which at first sight appears binding, but has so many conditions that it is unlikely (objectively) to be made unconditional and which prevents a seller from continuing to market the property.

PIM Report - A Project Information Memorandum (PIM) Report is issued by a local authority giving detailed features of the land that are known to the council, such as the storm water system and any statutory authorisations which must be obtained before any construction work begins. A PIM Report is most likely to be used for a bare plot of land, whereas a LIM Report is issued for a property with an existing building or house.

Pre-nuptial agreement - Now replaced with a 'relationship property agreement' or 'contracting out' agreement. It is occasionally called an 'ante-nuptial agreement' or colloquially as a 'pre-nup'. A property agreement entered into (and signed) before a couple is married, or before an unmarried couple starts sharing property assets.

Possession date - The date on which the buyer physically takes possession of the property. The possession date can be different from the settlement date.

Power of Attorney - Written authority where one person is authorised to act for another and sign documents on their behalf. It is not the same as an Enduring Power of Attorney.

Property sharing agreement - An agreement by people who are not in a relationship, but own property together.

Purchaser - Buyer.

Rating Valuation (RV) - The new name for the old 'Government Valuation' issued by Quotable Value New Zealand or a similar agency.

Relationship property agreement - An agreement between two people in a relationship that determines the manner in which property is owned if the concept of sharing, set out in the Property (Relationships) Act 1976, does not apply. See 'Pre-nuptial agreement' above.

Right-of-way - Access to one property over another property. The right-of-way will be recorded on the title of both properties.

Settlement date - The date on which a property is fully paid for. It is usually also the date of possession, but not necessarily so.

Tenants in common - A form of land ownership in which several owners have undivided possession of the land so that none of them is entitled to exclusive possession of any part of the land. On the death of one of the owners, that person's share passes according to their Will. If there is no Will, the property is disposed of according to the rules of intestacy.

Tender - Prospective buyers make written bids, however the seller is not required to accept any of the bids. In an 'open tender' the bids are opened when received - there is no deadline. A 'closed tender' has a due date and none of the bids are opened until the specified date and time. Sometimes the bids in a closed tender are called 'sealed bids'.

Tenure - The manner in which property is held, for example, leasehold or fee simple.

Term - The period over which a loan is to be repaid to the lender or the length of time of a lease.

Unconditional - An offer made on a property with no conditions, or when all the conditions have been met in an Agreement the property goes 'unconditional'. Auction sales are made on an unconditional basis.

Unit title - Where apartments or flats are individually owned as a unit title, but common areas (driveways, etc) are owned and administered by the body corporate.

Vendor - Seller.
